

James Russell Wall Barn

This barn is shown in a state of demise. It is being torn down in this picture, during 1996. It has served its builder and owner for many years on the farm formerly owned by "Jim-a-Lion Lindsay" (James Lyon Lindsay). James Russell Wall built and used the barn for many years in a thriving, larger dairy operation. About 1996 "Russ" sold to a developer. "Russ" died in 1998.

It was located in Center Creek, on 3600 East and below 1200 South on that lane, on the right side of the street. Tradition tells of 2 or 3 Brundage children being burried in the field north of this barn, during the devastating "flu" epidemic of 1917 and 1918. This was reported through Louris Mahoney.
